USER's Guide

The role of Water Quality Coordinators continues to evolve as the level of public interest, Congressional concern, and Extension programming increases and intensifies. Water Quality Coordinators are a vital link in Extension programming in every State. They are the primary contact for interstate communications within the Cooperative Extension System and for other agencies and organizations interested in exploring cooperative efforts.

The format of this directory differentiates between Administrative Coordinators and Programmatic Coordinators. In general, Administrative Coordinators are responsible for representing the Extension Administration (including the Federal viewpoints) in the administration of WATER QUALITY PROGRAMS in their respective States. They are denoted in the directory by WQ-AC following their names.

The Programmatic Coordinators generally are responsible for interactions with technical staff in the development and delivery of Extension education materials and programs. They are denoted by WQ-PC following their names. In some States, one person shoulders both responsibilities. They are denoted by WQC following their names.

NOTE: Errors, omissions, or suggested changes should be brought the attention of the ES-Water Quality Initiative Team listed on page 12-14.
